F. D. R. PLEDGES AID TO ALLIES; LASHES ITALY

Invokes Neutrality Act As Mussolini Plunges Into War

SAYS FRANCE WAS "STABBED IN BACK"

Calls On U. S. to Be Ready For Emergency, Every Defense

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, June 11.—Invoking the neutrality act against Italy, President Roosevelt held out to the embattled Allies today an unequalled pledge of material and moral support from the United States.

A series of presidential proclamations last night which named Italy as a belligerent, subject to the task of "neutrality" restrictions, provided the official postscript to a strongly-worded pronouncement on foreign affairs by the chief executive.

Rejects Peace Opportunity
The Italian government, Mr. Roosevelt said in a historic address at Charlottesville, Va., had rejected the opportunity for peaceful negotiations of its differences with France and England.

The President delivered his speech to the graduating class of the University of Virginia—which included his son, Franklin, Jr.—but to his immediate audience he added the nation and most of the world by radio.

Speaking forcefully and with unbridled emotion, he declared that the widening theater of Europe's war imperiled this country's way of life.

"Once more," he exclaimed, "the future of the nation, the future of the American people is at stake."

Mr. Roosevelt summoned the United States to intensify its preparations for "the task of any emergency, and every defense."

An outside world "dominated by the philosophy of force," he said, would mean for the United States the "helpless nightmare of a people without freedom, a people lodged in prison, handcuffed, hungry, and fed through the bars from day to day by the contemptuous, unprincipled masters of other continents."

How Can We Prevent It?
"The natural also that we should ask ourselves how now we can prevent the building of that prison and the placing of our lives in the midst of it."

"Overwhelmingly we, as a nation, and this applies to all the other American nations, we are convinced that military and naval victory for the rods of force and hate would endanger the institution of democracy in the western world—and that equally, therefore, the whole of our sympathies lie with those nations which are giving their lifeblood in combat against those forces."

"In our American unity, we will turn to F. D. R., Page 8.

Ford's Ready to Make 1,000 Planes a Day

Mass Production, Within Six Months, Simple Task, He Says

(By Associated Press)
DETROIT, June 11.—Mass production of high-speed pursuit planes for the United States army—at least 1,000 a day within six months—not only will be a simple task, Henry Ford said today, but they can be rolled off his assembly lines without interruption to normal output of automobiles.

The 76-year-old Ford made this assertion in an interview after he and his engineers had inspected yesterday the type of plane the United States war department believes would be "most needed in an emergency." It was a Curtiss P-40, single-engine machine with a top speed of 367 miles an hour.

"But remember," said Ford, "who has held a life-long hatred of war, 'they are to be for defense only; that's the bargain all the way through.'"

Ford, disclosing that he had been working on a new airplane motor for some time, indicated that he was ready to get under way as soon as a go-ahead order is received from the war department.

Ford smiled confidently as he completed his personal survey and turned the big speedster over to his engineering staff.

"It was not a bit more complicated than I anticipated," he said today. "All we have to do is get the first one right; the remainder of the volume then becomes a production job."

Welding, he said, would replace the thousands of rivets in the plane's wings in mass production.

BRITAIN SEEKS U.S. DESTROYERS

Strives to Keep Up With Nazi Mass Production Of Submarines

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, June 12.—Reports that Germany was turning out submarines on a semi-mass production basis stirred Allied interest today in the possibility of obtaining destroyers from the United States.

Naval circles heard that the Germans were concentrating on the construction of small submarines of 250 tons, which carry six torpedoes and have a cruising range of only 1,000 miles.

Authorities believe that the production rate is 12 to 20 a month. Many of the U-boats are understood to have been built piece-meal in the interior of Germany and assembled at coastal points.

In view of this construction and British destroyer losses, it was learned, the British government would like to buy any destroyers that the United States navy believes it can spare. Well-informed sources estimate that 25 to 35 British destroyers have been sunk and more put out of action.

Canada, too, is known to be interested in naval equipment, if not complete destroyers.

The United States navy has 35 World war destroyers which have been out of active service since the middle 1920's. Officials estimate that it would require an average of two months to get them ready for use. Funds to bring them up to par are included in the emergency defense program. The navy has 27 destroyers under construction.

Selling Laws Listed
Present law provides that naval vessels cannot be sold until they have been stricken from the navy's list of useful ships. Congress, however, could authorize direct sale of any naval craft to the Allies.

Reliable sources said that further trade-ins of American warplanes to manufacturers, who could sell them to England and France, were even more imminent than the possible destroyer deal. The army, they said, is considering turning in 150 combat training planes in a manner similar to that by which 50 naval reserve planes already are reaching the Allies.

U. S. ASSURANCE MEANS VICTORY, ENGLAND'S VIEW

Clement R. Attlee Gives Report In House Of Commons

DECLARES "DAY FOLLOWED NIGHT"

Churchill and Aids Too Busy To Appear At Session

(By Associated Press)

LONDON, June 11.—President Roosevelt's assurance of material aid from the United States insured an Allied victory in the war against Germany, Clement R. Attlee told the house of commons in a war report today.

"From across the Atlantic has come the answer of a great democracy," Attlee said.

"Day Follows Night"

"It was as though day had followed night when, only a few hours after the dictator of Italy had made his dastardly announcement before the serried ranks of the blackshirts the President of the United States delivered to the youth of his country a message worthy of a great and free republic sending the whole of America's sympathies to those nations who are giving their lifeblood in combat against the forces of hate."

Attlee said Roosevelt had "vitaly inspired the free peoples of Europe. His assurance that the material resources of his great Nation would be placed at the disposal of the Allies makes it inevitable that however hard the road the cause of civilization will in the end prevail."

The house resounded with cheers. Hitler and Mussolini have united to destroy democracy, he said, but "democracy will answer the challenge."

Not Dismayed

Attlee said "this new attack does not cause us dismay." "It makes no difference to our stern resolution to defeat all our enemies or to our confidence in our ability to withstand all attacks and achieve victory."

Replying to a question as to why the scheduled secret session had been postponed today, Attlee said "in the face of the new development in the war the prime minister and the service ministers are very heavily occupied."

Substituting for Prime Minister Churchill, who was absent, Attlee told the house that Britain already had seized 14 Italian ships. Ten others are in British ports, he said. He accused Mussolini of using "jackal" tactics in entering the war.

$62 In Pocketbook Is Saved by Woman

Mrs. Roland Knepper called a young robber's bluff when he entered her home on N. Lincoln ave. at 2 p. m. yesterday and picked up her pocketbook which contained $62. Mrs. Knepper, although frightened, grabbed her purse from the youth and ordered him out of the house. She called police and Chief Ralph Stoffer and Patrolman Nerr Gaunt drove north on Route 62 in an effort to find the intruder who fled in that direction. He was believed to have "thumbed" a ride with a passing motorist.

U. S. SHIP WITH 1,020 ABOARD IS HALTED BY SUB

Washington Held Up, Enroute From Lisbon To Galway

"LEAVE SHIP" IS SUBMARINE ORDER

Edict Is Then Rescinded, And Liner Continues Trip

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The state department announced today that the United States liner Washington with 1,020 passengers enroute from Europe was stopped early this morning by an unidentified submarine which first ordered abandonment of the ship but later allowed it to proceed.

The liner was on its way from Lisbon to Galway, Ireland, to pick up additional Americans.

It was stopped at 5 a. m. G. M. T. (midnight E. S. T.) by the submarine at 12 degrees 50 minutes west 42 degrees, 12 minutes north.

The state department released the exchange of messages between the Washington and the submarine in which the submarine first ordered "leave ship."

The exchange of messages between the Washington and the submarine by blinker signal in the early dawn follows:

Submarine: "Stop ship. Ease-to ship. Torpedo ship."

Washington: "American ship."

Submarine: "Leave ship."

Washington: "American ship."

Submarine: "10 minutes."

Washington: "American ship."

Submarine: "No answer from submarine."

Washington: "American ship."

Submarine: "Thought you were another ship. Please go on. Go on."

The state department said that upon the order "to leave ship" the passengers and crew, the latter numbering 570, were ordered to lifeboats and some of the boats were actually being lowered when the order came from the submarine to "please go on."

The Washington proceeded and soon afterward sighted a second submarine but without any interference.

Capt. Harry Manning communicated by radio telephone with U. S. Lines offices in New York.

Roosevelt Seeks Fifty-Million For Refugees' Relief

WASHINGTON, June 11.—President Roosevelt today drafted a letter asking congress to appropriate $50,000,000 to be used by the Red Cross for refugee relief in Europe.

The letter will be sent to Vice President Garner and Speaker Bankhead today.

Stephen Early, presidential secretary, said food, clothing and medical supplies would be considered as material resources.

Early said Mr. Roosevelt probably would ask that the $50,000,000 be appropriated to him—he is President of the Red Cross—and that it would then be turned over to the Red Cross for administration.

Salem's Red Cross chapter today renewed appeals for contributions.

The chapter has already raised $2,000, its original quota, and this has been sent to national headquarters. Recognizing that the task of raising the second $2,000 will likely be more difficult, the chapter appealed to the public today to make every effort to meet this second quota inasmuch as the need for relief funds in Europe is increasing day by day, with the scene of conflict constantly enlarging.

German Planes Bombing Paris; Flames Spread

(By Associated Press)

BERLIN, June 11.—The German army has reached the Marne river at one point, an authorized source declared tonight.

Exactly where on that historic French defense line the Germans were striking, however, he declined to say.

Authoritative information earlier had the Germans operating in the vicinity of the river where the French, in September, 1914, turned back a German army swiftly approaching Paris.

ITALY FACING WAR-AND TAXES

No Direct Reports Available Yet On Action Of Troops

(By Associated Press)
ROME, June 11.—Italy marshalled all her imperial resources for war today as authoritative sources said Fascist troops, naval and air forces undoubtedly are engaging the Allies.

New taxes—in some cases increases of 100 per cent—were levied by the cabinet in a one-hour session devoted to war legislation.

Rents, prices and salaries were fixed to suppress speculation, assure stability and guarantee the army's purchasing power.

Crime Punishment Stiffened
Punishments for crime were harshened—including death for all offenses formerly punishable by life imprisonment.

Supervision or sequestration of industrial and commercial establishments within Italian territory operated or largely controlled by enemy interests was provided by the royal decree issued by the cabinet after its session with Premier Mussolini.

To make Rome an open city, therefore not legally liable to air attack—the military command and offices of ministers directing the armed forces left the capital for "somewhere else."

But there were no direct reports that Italy had struck a blow.

A spokesman denied reports that Italian troops had invaded France last night, but said he lacked information whether French territory had been entered since midnight.

(Residents along Spain's Mediterranean coast reported hearing gunfire which they presumed was from a battle between Italian warplanes and a British warship. All quiet, however, was reported directly by telephone from Gibraltar.)

No Comment On F. D. R.
The spokesman made no comment on President Roosevelt's speech last night beyond calling attention to the fact that the Italian press had taken no position regarding it.

It might be concluded, therefore, that it had created no particular impression in Italy, he said.

Italy threw her whole weight into the European war, after France months of non-belligerence, under the eyes of her 70-year-old king-emperor.

Just what sector she chose for beginning her battle against Great Britain and France in an effort to make the Mediterranean truly "mare nostrum"—"our sea"—was not disclosed immediately.

CHRONOLOGY

On Aug. 2, 1914, Germany invaded France. It was going to be a short war. The battle of the Marne began Sept. 6. When it was over the war threatened to last till 1915. It lasted all through 1915, and in February 1916 the Germans tried to break the deadlock with an attack on Verdun. There still was time for a short war.

On Feb. 3, 1917, the United States severed diplomatic relations with Germany and declared a state of war existed on April 6. First American casualties were reported in November, but it was not till the middle of the next summer that U. S. troops turned the tide of battle. There no longer was time for a short war. It was still to drag on till Nov. 11.

Perhaps the new war won't last four and a half years. But those who imagine it will be over in a few weeks are forgetting that within a month after the World war began, Germany was on the Marne.

NATIONAL LABOR FORCE

The question raised about WPA's new billion dollar appropriation when expenditures are soaring is being partly answered in a hurry. Commissioner Harrington has notified administrators to give priority to 73 projects favored by the army and navy. It may be imagined that more projects of a similar nature will be developed.

Plainly, the difference between a national labor force and WPA, when engaged in national defense projects, is slight. It would have entailed a new public policy, however, to institute a national labor force, whereas WPA can perform the same function without even so much as a new law.

WPA workers have been proud of many of the projects they have brought to completion. They have had a right to be, regardless of the fun that has been poked at their organization. It is safe to assume their pride will be even greater as they take a hand in performing some of the many tasks essential to the nation's security.

GERMAN PRESTIGE

Censorship will continue to conceal everything but favorable news coming from inside Germany. While Americans may hear of many unfavorable things on the Allied side, they will be insulated from everything that might diminish the prestige of the Germans. The very fact of this prestige—nourished on victory in Poland and the low countries—constitutes a problem in morale for German officers and their Nazi overlords. Nothing is harder to control than the collapse of confidence that follows over-confidence.

The German army is still rolling. But in the battle of France it is discovering, as it also discovered in the battle of Flanders, that it is pitted against courageous opponents who are not overly impressed with Adolf Hitler's Nazi juggernaut. Its losses are heavy. Young Germans who were told war was glorious are dying by the thousands on foreign soil. Perhaps some of them will remember that Germans of the preceding generation died on the same soil and begin to wonder why it must always be Germans who play the aggressor role.

These are remote possibilities. They do not take into account the effect of Nazi drum-beating and the ruthlessness of Germans in wartime. There existed in Germany before war began, nevertheless, a sense of defeatism. Many observers noted it. It was a conviction that Germany once more could conduct a sensational offensive, but that sooner or later it would bog down in the desperate resistance of its victims, just as it did a quarter of a century ago.

AS JAPANESE SEE US

The new fears which are shaking American complicity, the Japanese-American Review hopes in its current issue, should not be permitted to affect this government's relations with Japan. In the same issue the Review recalls it was 117 years ago that Americans took the first steps in altering Japan's destiny, "changing her from a feudal state, isolated from the rest of mankind and glorying in that isolation, to a great world power."

The Review's tone is not always so kindly, yet its apparent desire to stabilize Japanese-American relations bears on a vital question of national security. It is being pointed out in this country, notably by Walter Lippmann, that diplomacy in the Pacific cannot be separated from diplomacy in the Atlantic—and that the former is no credit to those who have been charged with the responsibility. Worst of all, it has been the result of accident more than intention.

As every Japanese who has lived in the United States knows, there is no animosity here against his country. There is only puzzlement, confusion and a feeling of shock over Japan's resort to violence to settle its problems with China. Americans readily admit they don't understand the Japanese and are eager to straighten out their opinions on a number of things. They are amazed that the Japanese should think of them as capable of conducting aggression at Japan's expense and are disturbed at the same time lest a military regime in that country conduct aggression at this country's expense. This amazes the Japanese, evidently.

Apparently, the only thing standing in the way of mutual confidence is lack of measures to establish it. The nation which altered Japan's destiny has failed somehow to keep abreast of the consequences of its act.

There's so much reckless driving these days that man no longer craves a house by the side of the road—rather he prefers it set back some few hundred feet, and protected by a barbed wire fence, in front

THE STARS SAY:

For Wednesday, June 12

ANOTHER eventful and enterprising day, with much stirring in the direction of high goals and sound ambitions, with happy and prosperous reactions on all departments of living. At the root of such achievement is much stability of character, with industry, application, sound judgment, fidelity and endurance winning their reward in personal success and satisfaction. Elders and superiors readily contribute to this and there may be inheritance or enhanced values in real possessions. The sentimental values of life are likewise responsive.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year in which their past labors, stability of character and soundness of purpose and objectives are in line for reaching rich reward, either in benefices from elders or superiors or in the increased valuation of investments, property or other possessions. There may be parallel satisfactions and preferments in the realm of the cultural social, domestic and emotional, where the flower of past performance blooms in happy concord and joy.

A child born on this day, while having much stability and depth of character and principle, may have much versatility in intellectual, artistic and cultural expression. It should achieve a lofty position in professional life.

Our memory goes back to the time—a long, long time ago—when the worst that could happen to our country was that it would go either Republican or Democratic, all depending upon the point of view.

Reforms In The Diet Help To Cure High Blood Pressure

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

PEOPLE WHO have been told that they have high blood pressure are inclined to believe that going on a diet is, alone, enough to fix them. I suppose it is natural for them to have this kind of psychology. Voltaire said that if there were no God, we would have to invent one; the remark applies to the high blood pressure patient and his diet.

High blood pressure usually afflicts those who have lived well, who are a little, or more than a little, overweight, who enjoy the good things of life, including the good things of the table, who have lived a gay and happy life under high pressure. When they are confronted with a verdict that something has happened to their mechanism, they naturally look back with regret on all the good times that they have had and they are inclined to ascribe their plight to their indulgences. They also think that if they reform and live an ascetic and monastic kind of life things will be reversed.

This, as I say, is perfectly natural, but I believe consciences need not be so troubled because I seriously doubt if their condition is due to any habits or ways of life. Nor, in my opinion, will diet alone fix them up. They must be taught to live a different kind of life and to change their habits in more particulars than one. They must be ready to take the strain off the entire system.

SYNOPSIS

Gabrielle Snow, lovely 18-year-old daughter of wealthy Samuel Snow, an oil magnate, falls in love with Peter Parsons, a handsome young soda clerk. Peter, however, is a talented pianist, a promising vocalist, and aspires to become a composer. Gabrielle's parents object to the match because Peter has no social background. So one night, while out riding with Gabrielle's friend, Dorothy Mackey, and the latter's fiancé, Tony, Gaby and Peter decide to get married immediately. Tony prevails upon Dot to make it a double wedding. After the ceremony, Gabrielle recalls that she married before she was 21, she would not get her inheritance until she became 35. "I'm glad of it," Peter announces. "I'd never have married you if I'd known you would have so much money. Now you'll have to be dependent on me!" At first, the Snows are furious, but finally give their blessing. Peter declines their offer of financial help, insisting on supporting his wife. Gabrielle feels a glow of satisfaction come over her. Oh, if Peter would only mix with this crowd, and it wasn't as if they couldn't! Why, her father was a charter member of this club, and she'd practically grown up out here. Learned to swim here, to dance, to flirt, to—oh, she might as well admit it, she was sick of poverty! "What's wrong in seeing the gang up in a while, Gaby?" Bob was asking. "Being married shouldn't take you completely away from your old friends." Gabrielle smiled. "It hasn't. I assure you, Bob," she said. "I've just been busy, you know." "Yes, I'd be busy too, if you were mine, Gaby; and I'd keep you happy too, believe me. But I think you ought to get out more—you and Peter." Going home, after the harmless little luncheon with Bob, Gabrielle felt guilty somehow. To begin with there wasn't a thing in the apartment for their dinner. And then she remembered that Peter would be home now. He had been off for over an hour, she noticed. This was his week of working the early shift. When she came in he was in the kitchenette, and the odor of frying meat filled the small, hot place. There were two places laid at the table, she noticed, as she took off her hat and laid it on the divan. "Hello, home already?" she asked, as she came to the kitchenette door. "Yes, I'm home," replied Peter quietly. There was no reproach in his voice. It sounded tired and listless and almost indifferent. "Well, I must say, Peter, that I've always gotten you something to eat," exploded Gabrielle. She couldn't help but notice that Peter's steak was browned so much nicer than hers ever was, and the crisp fried potatoes looked golden too. He was fixing a salad of tomatoes and lettuce, and he didn't reply to her remark. Although the food looked good, and she could have eaten some of it, she said perversely: "Don't fix me anything, Peter! I'm not hungry. It's too hot to eat." "Well, it is not here compared to the air-cooled country club," he admitted mildly. She looked at him sharply, but Peter was looking at the salad. The food looked so appetizing and had Peter urged her to eat with him Gabrielle wouldn't have refused a second time. "Who told you about my lunching at the club?" she asked, finally. "Oh, several of your friends took special pains to tell me they saw you lunching with Bob Elkhorn." His face flushed suddenly, and he laid down his fork. "I'm warning you, Gaby, don't do it again! I'll not have my wife being talked about! I'll not be made a laughing stock of those good-for-nothing wasters!" Flared Gabrielle. "I'll lunch with whomever I please!" "Not while you're living with me." Peter got up and went into the kitchenette. He stacked the dishes, then went to bed without a word. After a long while Gabrielle again went to bed on the divan. Inside she was seething. She knew if she would only lay a hand on Peter, or kiss him, he would be begging her to forgive his words, but tonight she felt more stubborn than she had the night before. And—Peter might not pay any attention to her.

It was late when she finally got to sleep, and she didn't hear Peter when he left the next morning. She didn't even fix herself any breakfast when she did get up, but instead took a bath and dressed herself hurriedly. She felt sick at heart over the turn her marriage had taken; it seemed she and Peter fussed every time they spoke to each other of late. She thought vehemently that she wished she'd never seen him; she hated him. Then, she'd have to fight to hold back tears. Finally she was ready, and she called Odd to her and buckled on his harness quickly. When she went out the door she slammed it viciously. She knew Peter would be back in two hours and that he started working nights on this day.

Not until she was settled in her own coupe, the wheel steady under her shaking fingers, and the motor purring perfectly, did she really notice Odd. Then she laughed softly, almost sobbingly, and pulled him over by her. He had been sitting, his head hanging dejectedly, in one corner of the seat. At her touch, his ears became erect and his bit of a tail wagged happily. Upon reaching the Snow residence, she quickly composed herself, resolving not to say anything to her mother about her quarrel with Peter. Although Mrs. Snow had outwardly made the best of Gabrielle's marriage, nevertheless, she constantly reminded her daughter in countless small ways of her deeply rooted disappointment.

Going into the long cool hall, she experienced a feeling of reaching home after a long, not-too-pleasant visit away. She hung her hat in the hall cloakroom, then went in search of her mother. It was, she noticed with almost a shock, only a quarter of seven. She almost laughed out loud when she found no one in the breakfast room. Hearing Violet stirring around in the kitchen, she opened the door and stuck her curly blonde head around it. "Company for breakfast, Violet!" she cried. Violet jumped, turned around, and grinned broadly. "Is you-all de company, Miss Gabrielle?"

CHAPTER TWELVE After bathing and dressing, Gaby harnessed Odd, utterly ignoring the usual program which called for a morning romp. She left the apartment still in a fury of resentment.

Once in the car, with Odd in the seat beside her, she drove around aimlessly. Inside she was seething over the fact that Peter had not kissed her goodbye. He acted as though she were a criminal because she had let the old bills go! Suddenly she resolved to go pay them—she had money in her purse; her mother saw to it that she always had spending money. She had never told Peter of this and she sometimes wondered if her father knew about it. Her mother always gave it to her in cash, and when they were alone, Helen bought her many bits of clothing and whatever else she admired in the way of perfumes and the like; but poor Peter, the old dear, never noticed. He really was a darling!

At the electric office, she parked, admonishing Odd to stay in the car until she returned. Then she went in. It was the first time Gabrielle had ever gone to pay a bill in her life. She waited in line for almost ten minutes, only to be told when she finally gained the window that Mr. Parsons had taken care of the bills that morning. Gabrielle was furious.

Back in her coupe, she drove quickly out to the country club. She hadn't patronized this place as much this summer as she used to do, and wasn't sure whom she might find around at the luncheon hour. A long line of highly polished automobiles stood parked neatly before the entrance to the golf links, while on the club house steps sat Bob Elkhorn, smoking a cigarette and looking utterly dissatisfied with his part in life. She honked one long cry and, when Bob looked up, she waved, and brought the car to a standstill. Bob was at her side immediately. "Lunch?" he invited quickly. "Sure. Why not?" she laughed. Gabrielle had worn a handblocked linen of pale green and orchid and yellow, printed on a chalk white ground. A sash of braided silk in these same colors, together with a pale green hat and sandals, made her look more golden than usual. And over their fruit cocktails, Bob looked his admiration. "Thought you'd gone out of circulation for good," he offered. "Did you really?" Gabrielle parried, smiling. "None of us ever see you any more since that Parsons guy ran away with you!" "Missed me then, have you?" Bob became serious. "And how, Gaby," he admitted. Gabrielle felt a glow of satisfaction come over her. Oh, if Peter would only mix with this crowd, and it wasn't as if they couldn't! Why, her father was a charter member of this club, and she'd practically grown up out here. Learned to swim here, to dance, to flirt, to—oh, she might as well admit it, she was sick of poverty!

CHAPTER TWELVE After bathing and dressing, Gaby harnessed Odd, utterly ignoring the usual program which called for a morning romp. She left the apartment still in a fury of resentment.

"I'm it," admitted Gabrielle, coming out into the large, airy kitchen. Her nose had caught the delicate aroma of hot biscuits and broiling bacon. She leaned against the open back door watching Violet, as she deftly placed measures of coffee in the large dipper.

Sighing, she turned to the screened back porch. It was nearly as large as her whole apartment, she thought, a small frown creasing her high rounded forehead. Vines of honeysuckle, climbing veranda and morning glories shielded the veranda from the east sun, their mixed sweet odors combined delightfully with those from the kitchen. "Shall I cut flowers for the table, Violet?"

"Spec so, Miss Gabrielle. Youh mamma's been gettin' 'em since you-all left."

"Well, I'm back now, so I'll get them," replied Gabrielle. Out in the back yard she strolled up and down the paths, nipping a flower here and a flower there, with her scissors. Her quarrel with Peter was submerged only a little way from the surface of her thoughts, and her enjoyment of the dewy, green grass, the tall, gently swaying poplars, and the myriads of multi-colored flowers was tinged with an almost sweet sorrow.

"Hi, down there!" came her father's voice from the second story. Gabrielle turned, looked up and waved a marigold at him.

"Guests for breakfast, Daddy!" she cried. "Peter with you, then?" "Oh no—he's at work. But aren't Odd and I guests?"

"Your mother's already gone down," he informed her. "See you in a minute, Gaby!"

ITALY NOT THE "FINAL STRAW"

Writer Says Mussolini's Line of Attack Still Doubtful

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.
Some way I have a feeling that Italy's entrance into the war isn't the straw that's going to break the camel's back.

Please don't misunderstand. I'm not underestimating the undoubted increase in the danger to the Anglo-French allies, whose peril already is great.

Still, it has yet to be demonstrated that Mussolini can throw his weight to such advantage that it will crush the already overburdened French armies.

Hitler's Sole Aim
That is Hitler's sole business in life at the moment — to crush France. The success or failure of his plans for overthrowing the British empire are premised on the collapse of the French. Hitler's business must be Mussolini's business from now on.

Hence Berlin's jubilation over the Duke's action in rushing in for the kill at a moment when the epic resistance of the poilu is causing the Germans a terrific loss of life and irreplaceable supplies. We shouldn't forget that neither Germany nor Italy can stand a long war because of lack of resources.

That's their own great danger. We must wait to see what Mussolini's line of attack is before being able to estimate the damage.

It is true that the Italo-German hook-up may force the French to surrender. But it may not.

I should say that the greatest immediate danger to France is the powerful Italian air-force. If Mussolini should drive his bombers at the heart of France the position would be grave.

Nature Is Helping
So far as invasion of Italian troops from the south is concerned, mother nature has done mighty well for France in the chain of Alps which run between the two countries.

France's big worry of the moment, of course, is the holding of that terrific German drive on Paris. The big danger spot, to my mind, is the French left wing which is being rolled back from the coast along the Seine.

And what if the German army reaches the capital? Does this mean the end of French resistance?

Whether the capture of Paris would cause the capitulation of France would, in my mind, depend on whether the French army of the north was at the same time smashed and put out of commission.

If Weygand can save his troops and equipment one would expect him to carry on in some other position.

FLASHES

PARIS, June 11.—The military governor of Paris today asked all young, unmobilized Frenchmen from the age of 17 and up to leave Paris.

No reason was stated. (Presumably, however, the French do not want youths of these ages to fall into German hands for use in labor battalions).

TOURS, France, June 11.—Anti-Italian demonstrations broke out at Lyons and Bordeaux today, while at Marseille 500 Italians were arrested during the night.

At Bordeaux, a crowd massed in front of the Italian consulate and broke several windows, shouting "Benito to the stake!"

Then the crowd moved on to the United States consulate where they sang the "Star Spangled Banner," "God Save The King" and "The Marseillaise."

OTTAWA, June 11.—A Canadian minesweeper was credited today with the seizure of the 3,921-ton Italian steamer Capo Noli after the vessel's crew had attempted to scuttle it last night in the St. Lawrence river to evade capture.

GIBRALTAR, June 11.—British sources said today that Italian crews attempted yesterday to scuttle six of their ships in Gibraltar harbor. British naval units reached there in time to beach most of them. One remained afloat, undamaged.

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica, June 11.—A crowd of 10,000 stoned the windows of Italian stores last night and cheered tumultuously for France, England and the United States.

NEW YORK, June 11.—The British radio said today members of the diplomatic corps, withdrawing from Paris, were bombed on the way to their destinations.

The broadcast, picked up here by CBS, declared they were safe. (Many went to Tours, French advisers said).

Two Are Arrested In Sawmill Thefts
LISBON, June 11.—Two suspects were jailed by Sheriff M. K. Duty last night in connection with the theft of parts from a sawmill operated by Fred Rose at Negley.

The suspects, one of which was jailed at Leetonia and the other here, will be questioned regarding thefts at a sawmill operated by Simon Harrold, R. D. 2, Columbiana.

BRICKER EYES EARLY SESSION

Governor Schedules More Conferences To Decide Question

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, June 11.—Gov. John W. Bricker scheduled more conferences today on the advisability of calling a special legislative session, but capitol observers saw little possibility of the general assembly being convened in the immediate future.

Such a session probably would consider separation of the state and national ballots at the Nov. 5 election; additional poor relief appropriations and the increase of maximum old age pension awards.

Governor Bricker said last week that if a special session were called, it would be held before the Republican national convention opening in Philadelphia June 24.

One source said, however, that the governor might change his mind due to opposition of forces of U. S. Sen. Robert A. Taft, aspirant for the Republican presidential nomination, who objected to a separation of the ballots before the convention on grounds that it might weaken Taft's chances.

Legislative leaders generally have agreed that should a special session be opened, members of the assembly would insist upon increasing the monthly pension maximum from $30 to $40, in line with recent federal social security liberalization. Sentiment was divided on the ballot separation.

Governor Bricker reported no decision was reached during talks yesterday with legislators and representatives of the inter-organization council.

Theater Attractions

Double features are booked for Wednesday at both the State and Grand theaters.

Following tonight's concluding showings of "Lillian Russell," featuring Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Henry Fonda and Edward Arnold, the State's program through Thursday will be a Bob Burns comedy, "Alias the Deacon," and a Jones Family comedy, "On Their Own" with the regular family cast.

The first comedy, which also features Mischa Auer, Dennis O'Keefe, Peggy Moran, Guinn Williams and Ed. Brophy, concerns the efforts of an amiable card shark who masquerades as a deacon while he solves the troubles of his small-town friends, turning the tables on a couple of small-time crooks.

The second feature, with Spring Byington as the mother (Pa, in this story is ill and not immediately concerned with the family's latest adventures) Ken Howell, George Ernest, June Carlson, Billy Mahan, and Florence Roberts, sees the Jones' conquest of hard times. Granny, played by Florence Roberts, takes over the helm, decides that California is the place for them, where they trade the family car for a bungalow court, turning a misfortune into a fortune.

The Grand's features Wednesday only will be "Hot Steel," with Andy Devine and Richard Arlen, Peggy Moran and Donald Briggs; and "Tomboy" with Marica Mae Jones, Jackie Moran and Grant Withers.

MARION—Nathan Spratt, 39, believed to be the oldest active blacksmith in the country, has announced that his shop will be closed every forenoon and Wednesday afternoon during the hunting season.

LUDWIG'S CASE NEARING JURY

Closing Arguments Held In Salem Manslaughter Trial

The case of George Ludwig, 57, of Salem, on trial for manslaughter in the death of his landlord, Andrew Drotzoff, 59, here last summer, was expected to go to the jury late today as closing arguments were heard this morning at the Lisbon courthouse.

Defense counsel charged that the state had failed to place the defendant in the home the night of the crime and attacked enforcement officers for alleged negligence in their investigations at the time Ludwig was placed under arrest.

Prosecutor Karl Stouffer was called to the stand by the defense Monday afternoon, at which time he admitted giving the prisoner a drink of liquor during questioning in the county jail. He said someone told him that Ludwig possibly could remember better if he had a drink.

ELKS OBSERVE 45TH BIRTHDAY

Charter Members To Be Honored at Rites Thursday Evening

the organization sought to establish itself on a firm foundation.

As in every organization at that particular period of its existence, Rutter recalls, the principal problem was of paramount importance and many and varied were the activities to bolster the treasury.

Rutter was a musician of considerable talent at the time and he recalls how his abilities cost him $5 at the lodge's first formal banquet. Allen was toastmaster. He called on Rutter for a vocal solo and Orie modestly declined. For this he was promptly fined $2.50. The evening went on. Others were similarly "tagged" for actual or fancied "muntiny." Then someone who really wanted to hear Rutter sing, called for a solo. Orie decided he'd better comply. He did and was promptly fined again—this time for singing.

Give To Special Fund

Charter members contributed to a special fund to purchase furniture for the lodge home and were paid back in the way of dues. And there were minstrel shows those days. Rutter recalls the first one, with George Sheets, now of Alliance, and Harry Kesselmire of Salem as the end men. He even remembers the songs they sang. And they really packed 'em in, too, he says.

On one occasion the lodge went into the racing business, renting the Driving park for a horse show. The lodge didn't make much money, Rutter recalls, but "we gave 'em a run for their money."

From the very first year, the lodge progressed, picking up members from Lisbon, New Waterford, Columbiana and other surrounding points. Then in 1900 the lodge took quarters in the Arbaugh building and, eventually, around about 1926, moved into its own home.

The institution of the Salem lodge was conducted by the Youngstown team. Among the visiting Elks were C. W. McNab, James Kennedy, Ed H. Moore, Randall Montgomery, J. D. Haag, William Connell, John H. Ruhlman, W. B. Hall, D. H. Arnold, H. W. Davis, C. P. Brenner, Chester Little, Max Guggenheim, C. D. Fell, W. N. Moore, Eugene Rook, T. T. Rook, Dan McVane, Samuel Connell, Joe McFadden and Harry Beagle of Youngstown; Will C. Morrow of Lisbon and F. W. Gaskill of Alliance.

175 at Banquet

The installation banquet was held in the rooms in the Cook building, with plates laid for 175. George R. Woolf of Cleveland was toastmaster.

Talks were given by Frank Mercer, then mayor, A. W. Taylor, D. D. Kirby, J. S. Goldy, William Dutton, James Robbins, S. W. Ramsey and W. C. Hutcheson of Salem; Ruhlman, Moore, Montgomery and Kennedy of Youngstown; Robert Cochran of Pittsburgh and T. P. Wassner of Akron.

The officers, then, were installed at ceremonies conducted by District Deputy George Woolf of Cleveland. In the Knights of Pythias rooms in the Anderson building, N. Ellisworth and W. State st. The first officers were: William Dutton, exalted ruler; John H. Hall, leading knight; Richard Cole, loyal knight; James Robbins, lecturing knight; Frank Allen, secretary; Charles M. Wilson, treasurer; H. A. Burkholder, John W. Trotter, John H. Dougher, Peter Benekos, Frank P. Dunlap, John E. Murray, trustees.

The charter members, in addition to the officers, were: W. H. Harman, S. R. Koenreich, Frank A. Meyer, George A. Shope, Mont G. Cook, H. A. Lawrence, A. J. Henry, E. L. Gibson, H. W. Smith, Josh Leaf, Daniel Murphy, A. W. Schiller, Orie Rutter, Ernest Riser, E. R. Meese, James Robbins, Lee Greenaway, Louis H. Brush, D. D. Kirby, P. B. Knowles, H. W. Kesselmire, O. K. Taylor, Jr., F. G. Bartholomew, W. E. Linn, William H. Kelly, Allen T. Thomas.

Dedication of the new lodge rooms, after the organization moved to the Arbaugh building, was held May 3, 1900.

The lodge has had 44 past exalted rulers. Fifteen are still living and affiliated with the organization, beginning with Louis Brush who held the office from 1898 to 1899. He was the third exalted ruler, following Dutton and Allen.

Others are C. E. Phillips, A. R. Stark, P. R. Lowry, Clyde Bryan, Dr. J. M. McGeorge, Ed I. Snyder, Jesse Dellenbaugh, J. N. Kyle, G. K. Mounts, C. A. Ivey, E. A. Harris, G. K. Jones, N. W. Kelly and C. L. Taylor.

BATAVIA, N. Y.—As a feature of a city-sponsored cleanup week, Batavia painters "slapped" a coat of paint on the residence of Mrs. Mabel E. Hopkins in 1 hour, 20 minutes, 5 seconds. The job required four gallons of mixed paint.

Invokes Neutrality Act As Mussolini Plunges Into War

pursue two obvious and simultaneous courses:

"We will extend to the opponents of force the material resources of this nation and, at the same time, we will harness and speed up the use of those resources in order that we ourselves in the Americas may have equipment and training equal to the task of any emergency and every defense."

The reaction of official Washington was that President Roosevelt had, in effect, served notice on the world that the United States was shifting its role of neutrality to one of non-belligerence.

For And Against

Members of congress who heard the President were either enthusiastic in their approval or apprehensive that the speech increased the danger of the nation being drawn into the war. Most of those who offered comments endorsed the stand Mr. Roosevelt took, but there were some who, like Rep. Rogers (R., Mass.), said the speech sounded like a prelude to a declaration of war.

Two aspirants for the Republican presidential nomination were critical in their appraisal. Frank Gannett, Rochester, N. Y., publisher, called the address "an inflammatory utterance likely to promote our getting into the war." Thomas E. Dewey, New York prosecutor, said that "the words may be the words of a neutral but the voice is the voice of a belligerent."

Mr. Roosevelt made it plain that he intended to drive forward with all energy toward the twin objectives of full material aid to the Allies and a formidable armed America.

All roads leading to the accomplishment of these objectives must be kept clear of obstructions," he asserted.

"We will not slow down or de-

—full speed ahead.

"The program unfolds swiftly and into that program will fit the responsibility and the opportunity of every man and woman in the land to preserve our heritage in days of peril.

"I call for effort, courage, sacrifice, devotion. Granting the love of freedom, all these are possible.

"And the love of freedom is still fierce, still steady in the nation today."
